AND THEN ATTEMPTED TO KILL VICTIM'S FATHER.

1 Latter Seized Pistol and With the Help of Neighbors Handled the Assallant Roughly-The Vietim, Who Is a Young Married Weman, Will Probably Die.

> Mrs. Frances McCabe, a young woman who was married less than a year ago, was shot three times yesterday afternoon at the home of her father, Dr. Isador Rosenthal, at 87 Glenmore avenue, East New York, by Samuel Mannes, a young man who had been annoying her with his attentions. Two of the bullets entered her lungs

> Mannes shot at the young woman's mother while she was taying to protect her daughter, and also pressed the gun barrel against the breast of Dr. Rosenthal. The father thrust the pistol aside, the bullet entering the floor, and there followed a hand to hand fight between the young weman's assailant and her father, in the course of which the Rosenthal apartment was wrecked. The fight wound up on the front stoop, with both men falling over a six foot railing to the street.

> In the struggle Dr. Rosenthal was badly bruised and his arm was wrenched in the fall, but he gave his daughter's assailant a severe pummelling, and when the nature of the man's act became known a dozen men in the neighborhood also took a hand, one of them using a club. By the time Sergeant Farrell and the reserves of the Brownsville station arrived Mannes lay unconscious on the sidewalk suffering from concussion of the brain.

> Mannes and Mrs. McCabe were removed to St. Mary's Hospital in the same ambulance. The surgeons found that she had little chance of recovery and she was put on the operating table at once. Mannes is likely to get well.

> The police were able to learn but little of Mannes. He told them he was 26 years old and boarded at 38 West Ninety-eighth street, Manhattan, with a Mrs. Lillian Harris. He declared that there had been a dispute between his family and the Rosen thal family over money matters, but Dr. Rosenthal said that he never saw the man until yesterday and had never heard of him until his daughter complained that Mannes had been pestering her for several months, insisting that she elope with him. Mrs. McCebe is 20 years old. Her father said she was married about a year ago to Warper W. McCabe, a salesman for a brick concern, whose work keeps him sway from his home much of the time. They have been living in an apartment house at 826 Hewitt place, The Bronx.

The young woman told her father that she met Mannes several months ago and that he found out where she lived and insisted on visiting her. Her husband the man's visits, she said, and threatened to thrash him if he ever laid hands on him. Mannes's visits continued in McCabe's absence and McCabe finally sent his wife to the Catskills and Monticello, N. Y. Mannes heard she went up there and followed her. To get rid of him Mrs. McCabe came back home last week. Mrs. McCabe went to her father's home on Thursday to avoid meeting Mannes. When she returned to The Bronx that been broken open and nearly all her dres torn up. Then she remembered that Mannes had threatened to destroy every-

She reported the condition of the apartment to the janitor of the house. The janitor eaid that a young man whom he recognized as having been a visitor at the McCabe apartment had called Thursday afternoon, saying that he was Mrs. McCabe's cousin, and asked to be admitted to the apartment. The janitor said that he wouldn't take the responsibility of letting the man in, but told him that he could get in with the assistance of a locksmith. The ianitor paid no more attention to him. From the description the janitor gave, Mrs. McCabe concluded that it was Mannes.

Mrs. McCabe was afraid to stay in the apartment after that and went to her father's home. Mannes and another man were seen in the neighborhood of Dr. Rosenthal's home on Friday, but he did not go to the house.

Mrs. McCabe's seventeen-year-old sister Florence and another girl were sitting on the front stoop yesterday afternoon when Mannes came hurrying up and ran by them without a word. He hesitated in the hall, and then heard Mrs. McCabe's voice in the rear of the apartment, which extends through the ground floor on one side of the house. A front door opens to Dr. Rosenthal's office and one in the rear leads into the kitchen.

Mannes pushed the kitchen door open and found there Mrs. McCabe, her mother, her sister Adelaide and brother Siegfried. Mannes drew a revolver and pointed it at Mrs. McCabe, saying:

"Now I've got you."
Before he could fire Mrs. Rosenthal jumped in front of her daughter and pushed her toward the room leading to Dr. Rosenthal's office. Mrs. Rosenthal ran along behind her daughter to protect her. Mannes followed and shot point blank at Mrs. Rosenthal, the bullet going into the wall.

Dr. Rosenthal had heard the commotion and when he rushed into the room Mrs. Mc-Cabe darted past him toward the office. She tripped over a rug and fell headlong in the doorway. Dr. Rosenthal rushed at Mannes, who had aimed his revolver at the prostrate woman, but before he could stop him Mannes had pulled the trigger three times. Two of the bullets entered her back at about the same place, passing into her lung, while the third cut through the flesh and buried itself in the floor. Mannes then turned defantly toward Dr. Rosenthal, who was pounding him with all his strength. Manues got his pistol against Or. Rosenthal's body but before he could pull the trigger the physician had turned Mannes's hand away, and the bullet went wild. Then they grappled together through the physician's office, strewing furniture. surgical instruments and medicine chests over the floor. Mannes was trying to get out the front door and Dr. Rosenthal was hammering him with all his might. They clinched when they reached the stoop, and nan effort to throw the physician over the miling Mannes went down too. Word of the shooting had been noised around the neighborhood even before Mannes appeared, and a crowd had gathered. The men in the crowd took up Dr. Rosenthal's fight, some using their fists and others any weapon they could pick up. One man who got a club got in the best work and stretched Mannes out uncon-scious with a blow behind the head.

Mrs. McCabe's husband wasn't at home last night and the janitor there said he wasn't expected home until about 1 o'clock

Mrs. Lillian Harris, who occupies the apartment where Mannes lived at 39 West Ninety-eighth street, and John Agronick, chauffeur, who also lives there, said that fannes brought Mrs. McCabe to the house last week and introduced her as his sweet heart. He said that Mannes met Mrs McCabe at the Metropolis Theatre, The Bronz, where Mannes was employed. Mrs. Harris is an actress, he said, and had a small part in "The Spoilers" last year.

August Fleminger, who runs the café in connection with the Metropolis Theatre, nichlest night that Mannes worked for him as an assistant manager until about three weeks ago, when he discharged him because he spent most of his time running around after Mrs. McCabe. Mrs. McCabe was at the theatre a good deal and didn't appear to object to Mannes's attentions, he said.

DYNAMITE FOR NEGROES.

Explosions to Drive Colony From Illinois Town-Blacks, Arming, Say They Will Stay. ROBINSON, Ill., Aug. 29.- Many house in this city were shaken this morning by two loud explosions, and when the people assembled in the main streets, many of them in their nightclothes, it was discovered that three sticks of dynamite had been exploded in an effort to drive a colony of negroes from town. The negroes are employed by Parrish Bros.; contractors, on street paving jobs, and both the contractors and negroes have received many threatening notices to leave or be killed. No attention was paid to these notices, but when the explosions occurred they were traced to the negro

The colored people were greatly excited and many of them left the place tempo-rarily, but returned after daylight. During the day they have been arming themselves and they express a determination to resist with force any attempt to drive them away. Joseph Evans, a man who was employed by the paving company but recently discharged, was arrested to-day and is now in jail. The authorities lege that he set off the dynamite and that though others have been concerned in sending the threatening notices Evans is the only man who had any special feeling in the matter,

SURPRISE FOR HAYES'S SISTER. She Discovered a Foundling on Conven

She went down to City Hall Park yesterday morning to see her brother receive a cup from acting Mayor McGowan, and he promised to call and see her in the evening. At 8 o'clock the doorbell rang and Alice answered it, expecting to see her brother. Instead she found a bundle of white fiannel. From within the bundle came a wail and further investigation revealed a month-old Policeman MoNulty was called in and with him Miss Hayes carried the baby to the East Fifty-first street station. Pinned to the baby's dress was a note addressed to

$60,000 SUIT AGAINST THAW

BROUGHT BY HIS FIRST COUN-SEL, JOHN B. GLEASON.

Lawyer Alleges That by False Statements Thaw Prevented Him From Collecting the Money From His Mother When She Was Willing to Pay-Thaw's Answer.

POHGHERPSTE, N. Y. Aug. 29 .- Papers were served on Harry K. Thaw to-day by Deputy United States Marshal Gebhard of New York in a suit brought by John B. Glesson of counsel for Thaw in his first trial for the murder of Stanford White, in which the jury disagreed, to recover $60,000 balance elleged to be due for counsel fees. The action is brought in the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York. Thaw is described in the papers as a citizen and resident of Pennsylvania and his domicile is referred to as in the city of Pittsburg in that State.

Glesson's complaint is a long typewritten document which makes several sensational charges against Thaw. He accuses him of fraud and misrepresentation and declares that on account of statements made to him by Thaw, which he subsequently found to be untrue, he was prevented from collect ing the $60,000 balance due him from Thaw's mother, Mary C. Thaw, at the time of the first trial, when she was willing to pay it. Gleason's action does not affect Thaw's pankruptcy proceedings. The former has a right to sue to establish his claim, which will further be subject to the routine procedure in all bankruptcy cases. The charges of fraud or misrepresentation if established will not give Gleason precedence over other creditors.

The complaint in Gleason's suit against Thaw recites that on June 28, 1906, the defendant was indicted in New York for murder in the first degree and pending trial of the indictment was confined in the City Prison. The trial took from January 23, 1907, to April 12 in the same year, and resulted in a disagreement of the jury.

Gleason declares that Thaw retained him as chief counsel in July, 1906, and that he served him in that capacity until February 1907, when without fault on his part and in the performance of services of great value he gave up his position and continued to act as counsel until June, 1907.

His services, Gleason affirms, were res sonably worth $80,000. He has received from Thaw $30,100, of which $30,000 was paid December, 1908, and June, 1907, to be used in his discretion for the general purpose of the defence, of which sum, at the direction of Thaw, he made disbursement samounting to $10,115 which were approved by Thaw nd settled on that basi

In November, 1906, and thereafter, Gleaon maintains, Thaw knew that his services before the trial was over would be worth from $75,000 to $100,000. In July of that year Thaw, he declares, for the purpose of obtaining the right to command his services and discursements without payment or security made statements to him which were false and untrue, to the effect that there had been a family settle nent so that Thaw actually owned interests in his father's estate or derived therefrom and other property interests more than enough to pay all expenses of the trial. although these expenses should exceed 00, and that Thaw said that the actual value of his property interests that he could mortgage or dispose of was largely in excess of that sum.

Gleason further alleges that Thaw stated he would be able to arrange with his mother to have her pay the bulk of the expenses as a gift to him and chargeable only against his share in her estate; that all amounts to be paid by his mother were in the nature of advancements and not to be held against him personally but against his share in her estate.

These statements, Gleason alleges, wer nade in November and December, 1906, at which time Thaw stated that the bill of Hartridge & Peabody was assumed by his mother and payable out of his share in her state. At this time, Gleason asserts, Mary C. Thaw was ready, if required, to assume payment of his bill as after the trial to be rendered, and would have assumed the payment of the same if required by him.

About the middle of December, Gleason lleges, in answer to his suggestion that Mary C. Thaw secure him, the defendant objected upon the ground that he (Gleason) should be responsible to him alone, and prevented Gleason from applying for and obtaining such security from Mary C. Thaw Thaw, Gleason declares, agreed to pay him as much as $50,000 and to arbitrate if the bill was more than that if he should prefer to do so. Gleason is informed, he says, that at that time Mrs. Thaw had made a will wherein she had set apart for the benefit of Thaw share or interest of more than $500,000 He further maintains upon information and belief that the actual agreement between Harry Thaw and his mother was that two-thirds of the amounts paid or to be paid by Mary C. Thaw should be charged against Thaw's share in her estate and one-third absolutely remitted, but that Thaw should give her his promissory notes bearing interest as the sums were paid by her, and that as to third parties she should be regarded as a creditor to the amount of her notes and might assert them as a legal claim against Harry K. Thaw whenever

The existence of this agreement, Gleaso lieges, was concealed from him by Thaw, who made statements to him to the contrary of the facts in pursuance of his fraudu-

Gleason in conclusion repeats that there s still $60,000 remaining due to him from Thaw by reason of the fraud of the latter. He asserts that this action is brought to recover for the liability of the defendant under the said false pretences and false representations where plaintiff suffered damage to the amount of $60,000 and in-terest from June 1, 1907.

terest from June 1, 1907.

Gleason appears as attorney person for himself.

Thaw in an interview to-nis...; said:
"I was very much astonished to receive papers in a suit brought by Mr. Gleason against me for 20,000 and at the allegations of fraud and misrepresentation which Mr. Gleason sets up in his papers as made to him. There was absolutely no misrepresentation of any kind.

I am sorry that he wants more remuneration in addition to the sums already got by him and sorry that he has brought suit, as some of my friends have no regard for him or the way in which he

Swimmers Make Wonderful Time Under New Treatment.

It was demonstrated yesterday in the swimming races of the Chateau des Beaux Arts at Huntington Bay, Long Island, that oxygen administered to an athlete before a contest makes him do all sorts of things to the records. Ray Mulvey of the Bath Beach Swimming Club was made the subject of the test in a special 100 yard race. The oxygen was given to him by Dr. E. E. Smith, professor of physiology. Fordham University: Dr. J. G. Bisling of Huntington and Dr. Mulvey, who formed a committee on the case. The swimmer was paced by E. J. White, who was supposed to be Mulvey's equal out the oxygenized performer clove through the water like a steam engine, leaving h opponent behind him at every stroke. Mul vey did the 100 yards in 58 2-5 seconds, or early eight seconds faster than he ever pefore swam the distance. He said he felt as fresh as a daisy and Dr. Smith said in an interview afterward that oxygen was the athletic food of the future and that the public was on the eve of an all around mashing of the record tables.

Miss Elaine Golding, the champion woman swimmer of 'America, was the next to get oxygen and she swam against the 440 yard record for women. This distance she covered in 8 minutes 4% seconds, which s a new mark. Oxygen was then given to George Lewars of the Bath Beach Swimming Club and he swam under water for minute 36 3-5 seconds. The new stimulant is to be tried upon a number of athletes and ewimmers during the coming week

TO MAKE SILVER INTO GOLD. Sir William Ramsay Fascinates Paris With His Transmutation Theories.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.
PARIS, Aug. 29.—The French public has been fascinated by Sir William Ramsay's discussion of the transmutation of metals by means of radium emanations, although there is nothing in this savant's discoverie with which THE SUN'S readers have not been made familiar in the last few months. Sir William is now devoting his efforts to transmuting silver into gold.

He admits that all experiments thus far show that the tendency is to reduce metals to the baser orders; that is, to those of lower atomic gravity. He argues, however, that the tremendous energy of radium emanations might as well be constructive as destructive, and this is the point he is

There are or ought to be two metals between gold and silver according to the laws of chemistry, one cessium, which has already been discovered, and the other argentaurum, which has been named in dvance. He hopes to succeed in changing silver into one of the three next above it in scale.

TO VOTE ON HUGHES IN 25TH. Leader Prentice Follows Parsons's Plan to Test gentiment.

By a vote of the election district captains in the Twenty-fifth Assembly district, taken at the instance of Ezra Prentice, the Republican leader, it has been decided to submit the question of Mr. Hughes's nomination to the voters at the primary by putting Mr. Hughes on one ticket for a member of the city committee. The same plan has been decided upon in the Nineeenth, and is to be followed by the Parsons eaders in other districts It was explained yesterday by some of the Republicans in the Twenty-fifth that an attempt to ascertain the sentiment of the voters by a caucus conducted by the captains had resulted in such conflicting reports that it was the consensus that it was only by submitting the question in some form on the primary ballot that any success could be had.

Leader Prentice sent out yesterday to all of the 1,750 enrolled Republicans a letter in which he said:

The Republican organization of the Twenty fifth Assembly district desires to have the sentiment of the enrelled Republicans of the district regarding the nomination of Gov Hughes. In order that this may be ascer ained I enclose two ballots, upon one which the name of Charles E. Hughes is printed in large type. Otherwise the ballots are in all respects the same.

If you favor the comination of Gov. Hugher will you vote the ballot containing his name? If you do not favor his renomination will you It is hoped that there will be a full and free expression of opinion and that every enrolled Republican will attend and vote at

The Vatican, the report says, will receive 8,000,000 francs ($1,600,000) as compensation for property formerly belonging to the clergy of Cuba. Mgr. Aversa has received an additions commission to carry out similar negotiations regarding church property in Porto Rico, after which, it is reported, he will e made a Cardinal.

When military occupation began questions were pending which Secretary Taft settled. The Vatican received about $1,200,000 on account of lands in Havana. ROOSEVELT TALKS OF HUGHES

GOOD POLITICS TO RENOMINATE THE GOVERNOR.

This to the President's Friend Dr. Iglehart of the Anti-Saloon League-Takahira at Oyster Bay for Diplomatic Ends -So Also Were the Farmer's Allies.

OTSTER BAY, Aug. 29.-Baron Kogoro Takahira, the Japanese Ambassador to the United States, arrived on an early train to-day and visited the President briefly at Sagamore Hill. He said that his mission was not of great importance—that he had come in relation to some diplomatic changes which doubtless would be announced in Washington.

Other visitors were the Assistant Secrepary of Agriculture, William Hayes; Herbert Myrick of Springfield, Mass., editor of the American Agriculturalist and other farm papers, and the Rev. Dr. F. C. Iglehart of New York. Secretary Hayes and Mr. Myrick came to talk over with Mr. Roose velt his plans for uplifting the farmer. They too made only a short stay at the Hill.

Dr. Iglebart is an intimate friend of the President and superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in New York city. He was worried over the Hughes situation and ran down to tell his troubles to the President. He said after the talk that he had been pleased to find that Mr. Roosevelt thought nuch as he did about the renomination

"The President " Dr. Iglehart said, "tole me that he had no disposition to crowd his desires for Gov. Hughes's renomination upon the leaders of the Republican party, out he did not hesitate to say that he though it would be political wisdom to place Gov. Hughes at the head of the ticket again this

Dr. Iglehart said there was no doubt about the general desire of the church people throughout the State for the re-nomination of the Governor. "They beleve in his ability and integrity," said the minister, "and desire his continuance in office. These church people usually have given the Republican party the majority n the State election and it seems that it would be a dangerous experiment for the political leaders not to accord him the

Some votes would be lost, the doctor dmitted, but he believed that where two or three would be lost dozens would be gained.

The lines could not be more plainly drawn than they are at the present time, and the right side of a moral issue is a political asset which the Republican party will need and must have to succeed in the coming election," he continued. "There is little doubt that revolt from the Republion ranks will be disastrous if Gov Hughes is not nominated, as the feeling on the question is so deep that the revolt

To turn down a man like Gov. Hughes, who has not only a State but a nationa reputation for political integrity, would, n my judgment, be political folly. It seems to me that there is a large stick of dynamite in the political camp which without most careful handling is in imminent danger of exploding. There are splendid men in the Republican party any one of whom however able or virtuous, would be accepted as a substitute for Gov. Hughes now that the issue has been drawn so distinctly.

*Whoever may or may not have been to blame for the difference between the Governor and the leaders of the party, it is evident that the church people of all denominations and people of high moral instinct who are not members of any church, who summer and winter with the Republican party, desire the continuance of Gov

Hughes in office and desire it intensely. "We do not believe the Republican leaders many of whom are persons of good judgment and high moral ideals. will commit the coloseal blunder of turning him down We are strengthened in these convictions by the interview I have just had with the President, who as a political leader and as an exponent of civic virtue is a sagacious

POLICE WATCH SALOMES. To Report to Magistrates, Who Will Dec

Following a letter from the Society for the Suppression of Vice complaining that women dancers, principally of the Salome type, were appearing before audiences in bare feet and legs, Deputy Commissioner Hanson detailed two plain clothes police men to each of the theatres last night to ook for violations of the law. Isadore Duncan, who is giving classic dances at the Criterion, was under scrutiny, as were the following Salomes—Gertrude Hoffmann at 'Hammerstein's, Laura Guerite at the New Xork Roof, La Sylphe at Proctor's Fifth Avenue, Vera Oloott at Huber's and Aida Overton Walker at the Grand.

The police got a pass to the theatres. They will submit reports to the police magnistrates this morning, and if the magistrates think there are grounds for arrests warrants will be issued.

Hint That an Ex-American May Soon Become a British Peer. Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.

LONDON, Aug. 29.-To-day's issue of the Throne contains an article headed "Lord Astor." which discusses the probability of William Waldorf Astor being raised to the peerage in the not distant future. The writer regards the honor as so imminent that he discusses the probable title which Mr. Astor will select, suggesting Lord Astor of Cliveden, or Lord

Hever of Hever Castle. There is a curious hint, however, that the title may be bestowed on young William Waldorf, who intends to stand as a candidate for Parliament on the Conservative side at the next general election. There has been no sign of a change in the King's strong antipathy to the elder Astor, which dates back three or four years, and of course there is no chance of his name being included in any honors list prepared by the present Government.

Justice Tompkins said he would take the evidence home and read it before signing the decree. In three months if no new evidence develops Mr. Ruiz will be entitled to his final decree of divorce. The evidence was taken in secret by Referee Wyre. It is said that the attorneys for both sides will ask the Court to seal the papers.

He moved in to-day, showing that he cared little for the old superstition that a Saturday moving means a short sitting. Mr. Rockefeller's new mansion is not yet completed, but his son has furnished the third and fourth floors and is occupying them. The basement and sub-basement are also occupied. The first and second stories are still in the hands of the decorators and the new organ has not been put in. It was said to-day that young Rockefeller is furnishing the new mansion for his father and mother and will have everything ready for them when they return from Cleveland. The house is built of stone and is five stories high, including the two basements. There is nothing pretentious or showy about it. It is substantially built and suits Mr. Rockefeller's idea, and has cost nearly $1,000,000.

A NEW BOARDWALK SUSPECT C. B. ROBERTS HAD BEEN THREATS ENED IN HIS OFFICE

By a Man Who Said He'd Shoot Unless Attentions to Mrs. Williams Were Stopped -Husband Cleared-The Chair Pusher Heard "You've Broken My Heart!"

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug., 29 .- Acting upon nformation from Baltimore, the nature of which is not divulged, the detectives who have been trying to find a definite clue to the identity of the man who shot Charles B. Roberts of Baltimore while he was riding with Mrs. W. S. G. Williams in a roller chair on the Boardwalk last Wednesday night have directed their energies to the location of a man whose name has not yet figured in the case. The one now sought is known to have entered Mr. Roberts's office in Baltimore within the month and threatened to kill him unless he ceased paying Mrs. Williams marked attention.

The identity of this man is known to the detectives who have been working on the case in Baltimore since early Thursday morning. Unquestionably he is not Mr. Williams, who has satisfied the Baltimore police as to his whereabouts on the day and night of the shooting. On the contrary, it is stated through a private source of information that the man the police are seeking is an individual who is bound to Mrs. Williams by more than a tie of friendship.

The police have learned that the man to whom suspicion new seems to point registered at the Brighton Hotel in Atlantic City within a week of the date of the shooting. The hotel management when asked to-night if a person bearing the name of the man who now is the central figure in the case had registered there admitted the fact. They refused to state when he left. It is known that the time of his stay at the Brighton and Mrs. Williams's recent residence, there were coincidental.

According to the information developed to-night the one the police now seek as an important figure in the case is well knows in Baltimore club circles. The detective who went down from Atlantic City to Baltimore to make investigations have learned that this individual has made no pretence of hiding from his friends his anger at what he believed to be the unwarranted attentions of Mr. Roberts to Mrs. Williams. He warned Roberts in plain language in the one of the strong secret reasons why the police of this place are not hunting a place highwayman as the assailant of Char Roberts of Baltimore, who was shot on Wednesday night while he was riding with Mrs. W. S. C. Williams in a rolling chair on the Boardwalk, came to light to-day with the reappearance of Jesse Jackson, the negro who was pushing the shair when a masked man stopped it and shot Mr.

Jackson repeated what he had told Capt Whalen of the detective bureau on Wednesday night after the shooting. This was a scrap of conversation between Mr. Roberts and Mrs. Williams which, Jackson says, he overheard a few minutes before he was ordered to stop his chair by the disguised man who called Mr. Roberts Mr. Roberts and Mrs. Williams were in earnest conversation, but that the only my heart," from Mr. Roberts. Almost before Mrs. Williams could reply to this came the interruption by the masked

Jackson had been in seclusion until to day upon the advice of Capt Whalen, When found on the Boardwalk this morning he didn't want to talk, saying that the police had told him that if he kept out of sight and held his mouth shut he would not be called upon to take further part in the investigation. The story that Jack finally was persuaded to make public adds materially to the facts that have appeared despite the censorship of the police, hotel managers and friends of the principals in the event of Wednesday night. "Mr. Roberts came and hired me outsid of the Shelburne Hotel about 9 o'clock on Wednesday night," said Jackson. "He and Mrs. Williams and a young girl, Miss Sarah Williams, got in the chair and I pushed them down to the Brighton Hotel. where the young girl got out. Then Mr. Roberts ordered me to push them on down

"Down around the Royal Palace Hotel, which is in a part of the Boardwalk that is never much used at night and which was almost entirely deserted on that night because of the rain, I heard the lady and gentleman inside of the chair speaking very earnestly. The gentleman was talking a little loudly and the lady was also speaking in a very earnest voice. They were not crying, but their voices sounded as if they were very earnest. "Just as we were passing Rhode Island . avenue, or about that place, I heard Mr. Roberts say that the lady had broken his heart. I could not understand what reply she made, although I heard her speak.

"Then a man walked up past the chair He was not a large man. He wore a dark brown suit, a wrinkled one, and wore a gray felt hat pulled down over his eyes. I did not see any mask on his face. The man looked in through the window of the chair rather strangely and walked on past me Then he must have turned around, for I felt his hand on my shoulder. "Stop that chair!" he said to me. stopped right there. Then he went to the front and pulled back the curtain in front of the people inside. 'Hands up!' he said first, and then, 'Come out of that, you ---.

"As soon as he called Mr. Roberts that name Mr. Roberts got out and then Mrs. Williams. I did not hear the man ask them for their money and I did not hear anything said about handing over money or valuables. Both Mr. Roberts and Mrs. Williams just got out and stood there a few feet from the man. He pointed a revolver at Mr. Roberts. That was the last thing I saw, because I ran back up the Boardwalk and I heard the two shots fired as I was running. I did not come back after

The man with the wrinkled suit was not at all nervous, Jackson said, and he spoke in a strong voice. Jackson did not hear either Mr. Roberts or Mrs. Williams make any exclamation and he did not see Mrs.
Williams offer her chatclaine bag.
"At first I thought it was a holdup man."
